EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP PROGRAM

Different voices can play an important role in accomplishing NPMA's goals. The Executive Leadership Program will establish a pipeline of candidates for leadership opportunities within NPMA who are representative of the association's membership.

CRITERIA

READINESS
Candidates should have a history of participation in the pest management industry and should be able to provide evidence to demonstrate his or her leadership qualities and potential as indicated by community or industry activities, such as state association involvement, etc.

ASPIRATION
Candidates must demonstrate a passion to succeed and have a desire to actively participate in developing themselves as leaders by seeking out new experiences, gaining new skills, and making a commitment to personal and professional development.

COMMITMENT AND ENGAGEMENT
Candidates must be committed to enhancing NPMA and the member experience and furthering the industry. Additionally, candidates must demonstrate openness to new ideas, maintain an approachable style, and share the organizational vision and strategy with others. Graduation from the Executive Leadership Program should not be considered an endpoint, but rather the beginning of the next stage for the candidate's leadership journey and, as such, each candidate will be evaluated for his or her long-term commitment and concern for the broad scope of issues related to the pest management industry.

ABILITY
Candidates display behaviors which indicate they have leadership potential: strategic thinking skills; commitment to personal development; self-mastery and integrity. Candidates apply critical and appropriate judgment to decision-making processes.

PERSONAL CHARACTER AND INTEGRITY
Candidates should demonstrate characteristics of high personal character and actively work to build and maintain trust and supportive relationships.
